

Senate Hearings Could Develop Into Attack on Policy in Vietnam

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate hearings on the proper role of Congress and the White House in foreign affairs could develop into a flank attack on U.S. policy in Vietnam.

Undersecretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach defends the Johnson administration against assertions it has oversteered its constitutional role in directing foreign policy.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., denied he intended his Senate Foreign Relations Committee's hearings to become a forum in which to press his longtime opposition to Vietnam policy.

Fulbright has proposed the Senate declare Congress, as well as the President, must approve any overseas policy if it is to be deemed a national commitment.

During the past 25 years, he said at Wednesday's hearing, the White House has "acquired virtually unrestricted power" to commit the United States politically and militarily, without congressional authorization.

Fulbright also said "this war which I oppose so deeply" is tied closely to the constitutional question of congressional authority in world affairs.

He said the United States might not have intervened in Vietnam had congressional approval been required at the outset.

The State Department already has issued a policy paper declaring President Johnson has both constitutional and legislative authorization for the steps he has ordered in Vietnam.

It says the President, as Commander in Chief, has constitutional power to deploy American forces, and reports this has been done at least 125 times in U.S. history without declarations of war.

It also cites the so-called Gulf of Tonkin Resolution adopted by Congress on Aug. 7, 1964, approving and supporting Johnson measures to repel armed attack on U.S. forces and to prevent further aggression.

But historian Ruhl J. Bartlett of Tufts University told the Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday the President has no authority to send U.S. troops abroad without the approval of Congress.

He criticized the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution as a vaguely worded grant of broad powers.

Bartlett said it could be read as congressional authorization for almost any step in the Vietnam area, including an invasion of Communist China "to prevent further aggression."

On the Senate floor, Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., said he was worried about published hints of a possible invasion of North Vietnam.

"This step is where I get off," said Yarborough, who has not criticized administration policy.

"Any land invasion of North Vietnam would be in my opinion an utterly indefensible step. It would be escalation gone mad."

Chairman Earle G. Wheeler of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate preparedness subcommittee that U.S. aims in Vietnam do not include the conquest of the North.

"Moreover, an expansion of the war—geographically or in number of participants—is considered contrary to United States interest," Gen. Wheeler said.

President Johnson recently approved addition of 45,000 to 50,000 men to U.S. troop strength in Vietnam by next year.

Wheeler said U.S. bombing of the Communist North "is achieving its objectives and is saving American and allied lives in South Vietnam."

Staley said the interim measures would "let the processors of this nation know that we are building for an all-out holding action that would affect every commodity and would shut down the agricultural plant of America."

Alluding to reports of scattered violence in three major withholding actions on livestock, grain and milk, the group has conducted since 1962, the NFO president promised that boycotts would be conducted with "a businesslike and calm approach."

The organization, which claims membership in 28 states, has never attempted an all-commodity holding action.

12 Negroes in State Guard

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The state Military Department said Wednesday that as of July 1, there were only 12 Negroes in the ground National Guard units and the Air National Guard.

The agency said the ground Guard units had 7,622 members and the Air Guard 1,708 members. The 12 Negroes are enlisted men.

Both units of the Guard said they are not recruiting because they do not have any openings.

President Johnson's Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders recommended last week that more Negroes be added to National Guard units in the various states.

Those Postcards From Vacationing Friends Have Same Old Ring

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that people get tired of reading on vacation postcards: "Having wonderful time. Don't you wish you were?" "Drove from 5 a.m. to 8:39 p.m. today and made 687 1/2 miles. Pretty good, eh? More tomorrow."

"Well, here we are at Expo 67, the big fair in Montreal, Canada. There must be an awful lot of tourists here from Paris, as a surprising number of people we talked to had French accents."

"In Laos, Myrtle found just the kind of silver Indian necklace that your wife asked her to look out for. Get ready for a shock, pal. It's costing you $237.50. They're cheaper by the dozen, but I thought that one was all you'd want."

"This is the first time Clara-belle and I have visited Niagara Falls since our wedding 24 years ago. The water looks pretty much the same, as I remember it."

"Had two flat tires today. More tomorrow."

"Sue still insists there was a funny smell in the house like leaking gas when we left. Would you mind going by and checking up? But be careful opening the door—a spark might blow up the whole joint."

"Sorry you can't be with us to see this beautiful, awe-inspiring scenery. But Malcolm is making hundreds and hundreds of color slides, and we'll show them all to you just as soon as we return home. That's a promise!"

"Everywhere a tourist goes today he gets gyped. Some motels sell you postcards for a nickel apiece, but this one costs a dime. It shows an interesting view of a shopping center outside Dubuque. The hamburgers we ate there weren't half bad, but—no catsup. C'est la guerre!"

"No wonder they say travel is broadening. Did you know that the Washington monument—see other side—is 555 feet, 9 1/2 inches tall and weighs 81,120 tons? My wife said it made her feel humble just to stand next to it."

"... and the bass were biting so fast that we finally decided, to keep the boat from sinking to throw back all those weighing under five pounds."

"As a souvenir, Fred, I got you a handcrafted pillow filled with pine needles and a swell picture of an Indian encampment embroidered on one side and that well-known painting, 'The Last Supper,' on the other side, which makes it ideal for the home. The trouble is that the pine needles stick in your ears when you sleep on it, but it still should make a swell conversation piece for your guest room."

"Too tired tonight to tell you all the wonders we saw today. More tomorrow."

Housing Cut Plea May Be Heeded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate appears ready to heed President Johnson's plea for restoration of a big part of the House cut in his model cities program—and to offer plans of its own for rebuilding the nation's slums.

Two Senate committees worked on legislation going far beyond the President's recommendations regarding urban problems.

A housing subcommittee may complete its work today on an omnibus housing measure to provide homes for low-income families. Numerous proposals are under consideration.

The administration asked for no such program this year, preferring to concentrate its efforts on getting funds for model cities and rent subsidies which were authorized in previous housing measures.

The subcommittee already has decided to include in the omnibus bill Johnson's proposal for a rat control program, rejected earlier by the House in an action sharply criticized by civil rights leaders.

Meanwhile the Senate Labor Committee holds its first closed session on an antipoverty bill broadened in subcommittee $3 billion beyond the President's proposal.

The subcommittee voted $2.2 billion for the fourth year of the "war on poverty," $148 million more than Johnson asked.

Johnson wrote a letter Wednesday to Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield saying "the tragic events of this summer" make it imperative for the government to move to restore the nation's cities. He asked the Senate to restore all of the $425 million the House cut out of his $662 million request for model cities, calling this "the most coordinated, massive and far-reaching attack on urban blight ever proposed to Congress."

Under the model cities program, authorized by Congress last year, cities can apply for federal aid to rehabilitate a substantial part of their entire slum areas. The plan would have to include not only new and rebuilt housing but also needed services in education, recreation, housing, transportation, health and sanitation.

Difficulty Shown by Romney

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Gov. George Romney of Michigan is demonstrating the difficulty potential 1968 GOP candidates are encountering in standing still on a Vietnam war position in this summer of political discontent.

Romney, an all-but-announced candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, was first classed as a dove, moved over among the hawks, and now is joining the critics of the North Vietnam bombing he once supported.

While House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan shrugged off his differences with his governor, Romney's contention that bombing would never end the war contrasted with Ford's call last week for a stepup in air attacks.

Romney was not the only Republican having second thoughts.

Rhode Island Gov. John H. Chafee, who would like to be the GOP vice presidential nominee, backed away from his previous endorsement of the air strikes.

Chafee, who will head the GOP Governors' Association next year, told a Providence, R.I., news conference Wednesday he is getting discouraged with the progress of the war and is altering his position on the bombing issue because "we're not winning to the extent we originally felt we were going to."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., who has been moving steadily toward ever sharper criticism of President Johnson's war policies, told a Cincinnati, Ohio, audience that if its allies don't put up more fight the United States "must ask itself how much more it is willing to expend on a war to protect primarily Asian interests."

At Springfield, Ill., Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., said although the Republicans are not making the war a campaign issue, "it's more of an issue with the people than ever before."

Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, has endorsed the bombing of military targets near Red China which Percy criticized. Their differences over Vietnam policy may have something to do with Percy's reputed willingness to become Illinois' favorite-son candidate at next year's GOP presidential nominating convention.

In Minneapolis, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon broke a lengthy silence on the Vietnam issue to say he approves extension of the bombing of the North.

But Nixon, considered another contender for the GOP presidential nomination, warned a news conference the United States faces a "massive risk" if it doesn't end the war soon.

In an earlier speech Wednesday, Nixon said he agrees with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower that the war shouldn't be made a partisan issue in the 1968 campaign.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help Us! this newspaper.

DO SCROUNGY GIRLS HAVE ALL THE FUN?

Dear Helen: I am 17 and have a question. How come boys go for the scroungy looking girls? At dances, all the boys rush the girls in tight pants, long stringy hair and floppy blouses. They aren't even good looking. I'm not ugly, I dress well, wear my hair in a flip, yet there I sit, unasked. Of course I'm not desperate, as college boys date me, but they don't come to these summer dances. —GINNY

"WHEN IN ROME" adage doesn't influence everyone, as shown here. Both ladies are in the service of the United Nations, but while one has adopted a Western miniskirt, the other holds with native costume.

Dear Ginny (and all the other Ginny's who are attractive, well-dressed, "un-scroungy," and unasked):

One way or another, you scare boys away, while the so-called "scroungy" girls put on that "I'm here" lure.

Perhaps you attract older fellows because you're quieter and more mature (which to a teenage boy means "harder to know.") Maybe you don't understand how to catch the male eye — let them see you're aware of them without seeming over-eager. Maybe you're not very good at small talk because you're too worried about saying the wrong thing.

My best advice: don't sit off in a corner and hope. Never stand with just ONE girl, but be a smiling, bouncy member of a group—though a little removed from it when the music starts, this so boys will notice you. When a boy looks your way, light up and beam him in. And once you've got him, remember HE is ill at ease too. Relax and appreciate him, and he'll be back, you can count on it! Good luck!—H

Dear Helen: I am five six, have blue eyes and blonde hair, am 17, and weigh 196 pounds. You may think this is a lot but actually it's great, for ten weeks ago I weighed 240 pounds. I was a dumpy, lumpy, pudgy-faced blob.

Now I'm an "on the way" to being a shapely, happy girl. I want to tell your readers that fat girls are not jolly. Maybe they try to be when they're around others, but when alone they're the people who would most like to end it all. Instead they eat! They don't stop eating long enough to realize what they are doing to themselves.

A Twiggy I may never be, but a "Happy" I am, for I know now that I can keep on dissolving those inches—I've lost six around the waist in 10 weeks. There's no reason for people to be fat these days, what with doctors, good diet foods, diet clubs and dieting people all around us. Once you're on your way, you discover a whole new you that was hidden by self-digest.

Helen, if you'd like, I'll keep you up to date on my progress. —WEIGHT LOSER

Dear W.L.: Please do! I'm sure your monthly progress report will inspire others to lighten the load. —H

Vietnamese Women Are Sick of War

By KELLY SMITH

THANH DIEN, Vietnam (AP) — She was 22, a thoughtful, compassionate black-eyed girl who had yearned all her life to be a nurse. She wanted to help, she said. And she pleaded to do so.

The Viet Cong asked her to help them. She did.

There was another girl, 18, a happy, teasing, teen-ager who was proud of long raven hair, who giggled with the boys and used to sneak from her house to meet a boyfriend.

Her boyfriend joined the Viet Cong. She did too.

Two women—now 26 and 20,

Two girls who became women under fire, not so much because of political conviction as personal conviction. Not so much to fight as to love. Two girls who reached out to live the life of a girl and became women at war.

Both girls are now in a camp for Viet Cong returnees. Three weeks ago, both turned themselves in to government forces, saying they were heartsick and tired of hiding, of war, and of bloodied friends.

Nguyen Thu Can, 26, and Tran Thu Anh, 20, had never met one another before they surrendered. Now they share a bunk at a Chieu Hoi—"Open Arms"—camp near Thanh Dien, 50 miles northwest of Saigon near the Cambodian border.

They live in a barbed wire compound with 72 other VC returnees. Twice a day, they eat in an open-air dining room.

There's a small library and dusty heat 24 hours a day. Like the rest, they have a reinduction period, undetermined at this point. They will stay another month—maybe two. And then?

Can sit on the straw mat of her bunk, wipes dirty perspiration from her forehead and stares a minute into space.

"I want to be a nurse. I always wanted to be a nurse. The VC said okay, you'll be nurse. I am not VC anymore, but I am a nurse."

She speaks, softly, shyly, through an interpreter.

"I was not afraid of VC. I was happy there. When I joined VC, everyone in my village was VC. Not now. We only ran and hid and it was tiring. Everyday, they teach me more about being a nurse."

The tale of the tape—that's the story of a serious, but unsuccessful bid for the first no-hitter in the 59-year history of Pittsburgh's Forbes Field.

Tape around the right ankle of Cincinnati's Jim Maloney enabled the veteran right-hander to make the bid Wednesday night. But it didn't prevent him from aggravating an injury, which forced him to leave in the seventh inning of the game won by Cincinnati 4-0.

Billy McCool took over and was touched for both Pittsburgh hits in the eighth inning.

St. Louis nipped the Chicago Cubs 4-3, Atlanta topped San Francisco 6-3, the New York Mets beat Philadelphia 5-3 and Los Angeles trounced Houston 7-1 in other National League games.

In the American League, the Chicago White Sox drubbed Kansas City 14-1, Cleveland topped Washington 1-0, Baltimore shaded the New York Yankees 5-4, Boston pounded Detroit 8-3 and Minnesota defeated California 5-1.

"I was scared," said McCool, who relieved Maloney after he stepped into a hole with his right foot in delivering a fourth ball to Matty Alou, making Alou the first Pirate base runner.

"I wanted it real badly," continued McCool, "but I wished he could have stayed in. I think he might have gotten it."

Maloney declined to talk about what might have been but he did comment about his ankle injury, which he said he suffered last Friday night against Los Angeles.

"I haven't been able to run on it at all, and the only way I could pitch tonight was because of the tape," he said.

He also said that if it had been his left ankle, he would have been able to continue, but since it was the right one he couldn't because he pushes off on it when he pitches.

Jose Pagan kept the Forbes Field jinx against no-hitter intact with a one-out single in the eighth. Jerry May followed with a double but McCool then settled down to preserve the shut-out.

Tony Perez's 23rd homer gave the Reds a 2-0 lead in the fourth, and he added another pair in the sixth on Lee May's RBI double and an error.

First-place St. Louis came up with two runs in the ninth on a two-out bases loaded walk and Alex Johnson's infield hit to beat Chicago. The Cubs had taken a 3-2 lead on Glenn Beckert's two-run homer in the seventh.

Ron Swoboda was the big gun in New York's victory over Philadelphia. He slammed three hits and drove in four runs.

How You Played Game Matter

BOGOTA, N.J. (AP)—The name of the game is baseball but when the Pee-Wee Leaguers go to bat is something else again.

The 7 to 9 year olds are devoted to the national sport—and devoted to their coach, too.

Staff photographer Eddie Adams covered several of the games here in which his 7-year-old son, Edward, played with the Bogota Warriors.

The team ended up last at season's end in mid-Aug. But the coach, quoting an old baseball sage, had this consolation for his team: "It's not whether you won or lost, but how you played the game that counts."

Eddie Adams (the photographer) made pictures of Edward Adams (the son) putting the coach's instructions on "how to play the game" to practical use.

Boyer's Hit Gives Win to Chicago

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Chicago White Sox, who sometimes seem to win with mirrors, did it Wednesday night with a hitter who can't run, a runner who suddenly can hit and—would you believe—three home runs.

The notoriously light hitting White Sox sprayed 17 safeties around Comiskey Park including two home runs by Pete Ward and one by Gery McNertney and walloped Kansas City 14-1.

Ken Boyer, sidelined by a pulled muscle in his left leg, came off the bench in the fourth inning and delivered a bases-loaded single that drove in three runs. The ball soared over left fielder Danny Cater's head and the three runners scored easily. But Boyer, limping badly, barely made it to first base.

Sandy Alomar, acquired just 1½ hours before game time from the New York Mets as part of the Boyer deal, started at shortstop for Chicago, lashed two 4½ singles and scored two runs. Throughout his career, Alomar has been noted as a fast runner and good fielder but weak hitter.

The victory kept the Sox 1½ games back of the streaking first place Minnesota Twins who won their seventh straight, 5-1 from California.

Boston moved into third place by beating Detroit 6-3. Cleveland nipped Washington 1-0 and Baltimore edged New York 5-4.

In the National League, New York beat Philadelphia 5-3, Cincinnati blanked Pittsburgh 4-0, Atlanta rapped San Francisco 6-3, St. Louis shaded Chicago 4-3 and Los Angeles defeated Houston 7-1.

Ward's two homers drove in three runs for the White Sox but the blow that broke the game wide open was Boyer's pinch hit in the fourth. It climaxed a five-run rally that opened a 9-0 Chicago lead.

Boyer, who pulled up lame in his second hit and scored the Sox' first run on Walt Williams' double. Williams stole third and scored on a passed ball third strike before Chicago loaded the bases for Boyer.

Gary Peters, who hadn't won since July 23, was the beneficiary of the unusually heavy attack and picked up his 13th victory on a four-hitter.

Minnesota bunched four hits and two walks for five first inning runs against California and that was enough for Dean Chance, who won his 16th game.

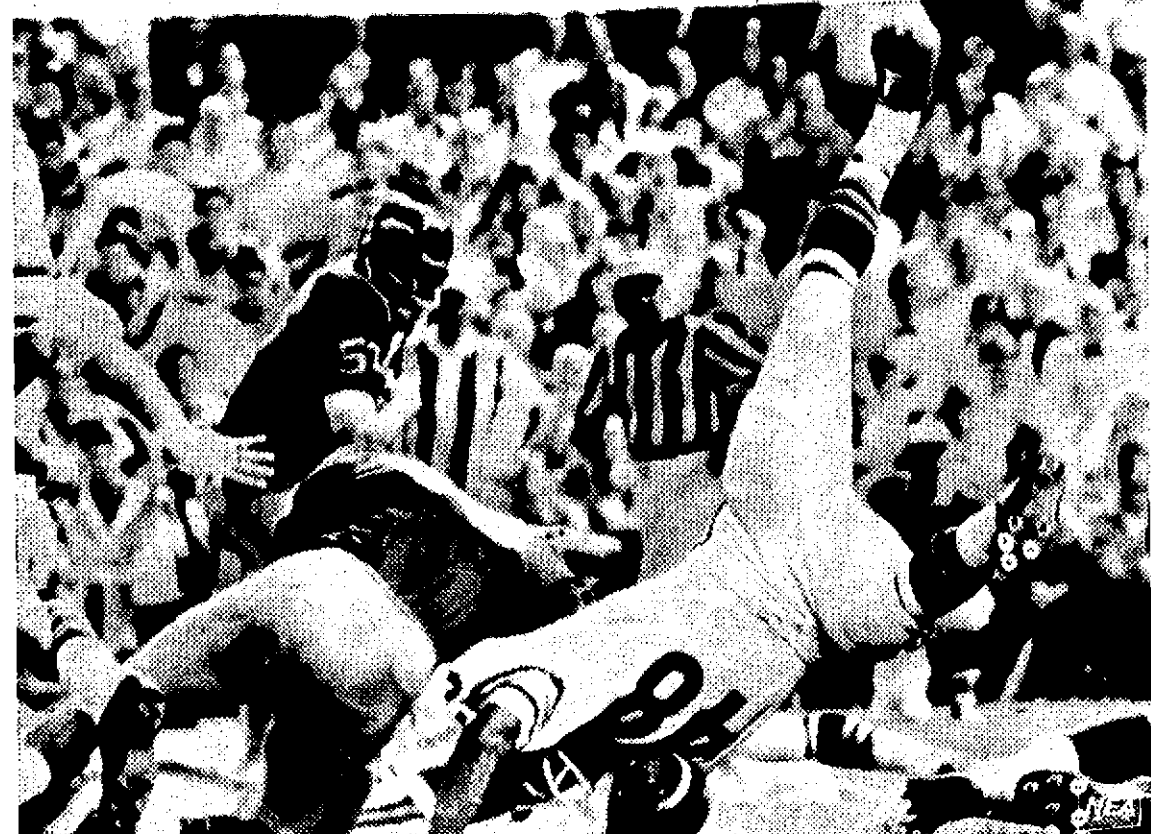

The first three Minnesota batters—Zolito Versalles, Cesar Tovar and Tony Oliva—tripled, doubled and singled for two runs. An infield out following two walks drove in another run and Ted Uhlaender's two-out double produced two more.

Steve Hargan outduelled Camilo Pascual and Tony Horton's ninth inning double—only the second hit for the Indians—gave Cleveland its victory.

Hargan, who struck out 10, finished with a three-hitter. Horton's two-out double scored pinch runner Chuck Hinton from first base. Pascual did not allow a hit until the seventh when Max Alvis singled with two out.

Frank Robinson drove in four runs for the Orioles—three of them on a sixth-inning homer.

Ortiz Gets a Decisive Victory

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Carlos Ortiz, his fifth straight successful lightweight championship defense behind him, had a slightly puffy eye cocked toward bigger and better fighters.

"Give me two months," the Puerto Rican-born New Yorker said in his dressing room after solidly trouncing Ismael Laguna in 15 rounds Wednesday night, "and I'll be ready to fight again."

"Two months. Then bring on Cokes," Ortiz said. The reference was to Curtis Cokes, the world welterweight champion.

"I don't need the money," the happy Ortiz said. "I'm loaded. But I would like to be the first Puerto Rican to hold three titles. I'd like Cokes."

Ortiz, 30, held the world junior welterweight title before taking the lightweight championship from Joe Brown in 1962. In lightweight title fights he's 11-1, losing the title to Laguna in his native Panama in 1965 on a 15-round decision, then winning it back seven months later in Puerto Rico.

This time there was little doubt about it. The broad-shouldered, powerful Ortiz started and finished strongly, rocking the 24-year-old Laguna repeatedly with a solid right hand.

In the middle rounds, he let up a bit. "I told him to take it easy, to let Laguna have a couple," manager Bill Daly explained later—and the swift, flashy Panamanian swarmed to the attack to the delight of a group of about 2,500 Panamanians in the shouting, chanting, flag-waving crowd of 19,480 at Shea Stadium.

"I had him from the first round on," Ortiz said. "I knew I had him when I first hit him with that right hand. He was fighting my fight."

"I was never concerned. I just wanted to be sure I didn't make any mistakes and had enough to go the distance if I had to. He was in good condition and fought a good fight. But I'm the champion."

Then he grinned even more broadly. "In fact," he said, "I'm the greatest."

Referee Art Mercante and judge Al Berl each had Ortiz ahead in rounds 10-1. Judge Jack Gordon had Ortiz the winner 11-3-1. The Associated Press scored for Ortiz 10-4-1.

"I'm very proud of my people," Ortiz said of the Puerto Ricans in the audience. "We don't want to do anything against our citizenship. I won. But I don't think there would be any trouble if I hadn't. But I fought extra hard to be sure."

Hundreds of extra police were on duty to prevent a recurrence of the riots that developed in Madison Square Garden the last three times Puerto Rican fighters were involved. There wasn't a hint of trouble.

speed. Time and again Laguna swarmed in with a flashy, two-handed attack. Time and again the stolid Ortiz punished him, tagging him in the second, fourth, eighth, 10th and 11th rounds with right hands.

"He tries to suck you in," Ortiz said. "He feints in, then steps back. I've fought him before. I know him. I just wait until he starts back, then go with the right. He's a sucker for it."

"I wanted to get him coming in with a looping right and end it. I just never found the spot. 'I'm 30 years old and have been fighting for 13 years. For six I have been champion. A boy like that isn't supposed to beat me.'"

There were no knockdowns. Ortiz suffered nicks at the corner of both eyes, but they didn't bother him. Each fighter weighed 135 pounds.

Eliminated in second-round play Wednesday were three-seeded Lesley Turner of Australia, fifth-seeded Mary Ann Eisel of St. Louis and sixth-seeded Kathy Harter of Seal Beach, Calif.

In action marked by upsets, top-seeded Maria Bueno of Brazil advanced to the quarter-finals in defense of her championship by defeating Tony Fretz of Los Angeles 6-2, 6-2.

Miss Turner was forced to default to Mrs. Joyce Williams, a British Wightman Cup player, with their match even 1-1 in sets. The Assie lass was forced to quit because of a blister on her racket hand.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Alaska, the 49th state, is a land of superlatives. According to The World Almanac, it reaches farther north and west than any other state. It has the tallest mountain in America, a glacier bigger than all of Rhode Island, and a national monument, Katmai, which covers an area almost the size of Connecticut.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Although there is every indication that LSD is a dangerous drug and although it cannot be bought legally, it is taken by many young persons to escape from a life that, with sober effort, they could set about to improve.

In many users this has proved to be an escape into an unreality that is a nightmare more horrible than reality at its most depressing. LSD may make you think it is Christmas in July but the gaily colored package under the tree may be death.

Fortunately for those who have been hooked on this drug, which is not truly habit-forming but which may have left them in a state of panic or mental confusion, a cure is available. The victim must usually be treated in a hospital to make sure he does not harm himself or others. Chlorpromazine or a similar drug has been found to be very helpful.

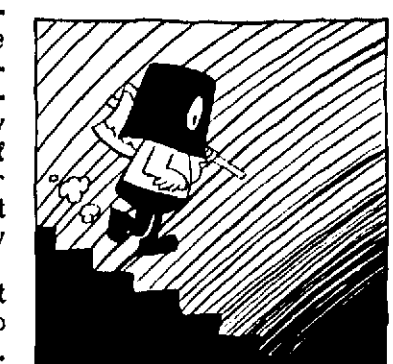

While we are on the subject, I would like to refer to two other reputedly hallucinogenic drugs (drugs that cause you to enter a dream world without actually going to sleep).

The first, not yet given a chemical name, is contained in dried scrapings from banana peels. The Food and Drug Administration spent two months investigating this substance, using every formula known to the hippies, and was unable to find any hallucinogenic properties in it. This, therefore, appears to be a giant hoax and those who claim to be transported by smoking banana peelings are either undergoing self-hypnosis or have reinforced their banana peel with a dollop of marijuana or LSD.

A new and more serious problem is the emergence of m e t h y l d i m e t h o x y m e t h y l p h e n e t h y l a m i n e, a compound that for some unknown reason is called STP. Capsules or tablets of this substance can be obtained only from illicit sources and at about the same price as LSD. Its effects are similar to those of LSD and just as unpredictable.

Granted that this is not a perfect world, those persons who seek to escape from it through the use of drugs are sadly lacking in a sense of responsibility. They are the ones who, instead of trying to make this a better world, have given up without a struggle.

TREASURE-HUNTING YOUNGSTERS were actually providing a novel ground-breaking ceremony when a New York firm began construction recently on a plant expansion. Since most of the products of Aurora Plastics are for children, company officials thought it fitting that they turn the first earth to satisfy the symbolic requirements. No trouble enlisting the kids' aid, after first burying little "treasures" in the ground-breaking area and then turning the youngsters loose with shovels.

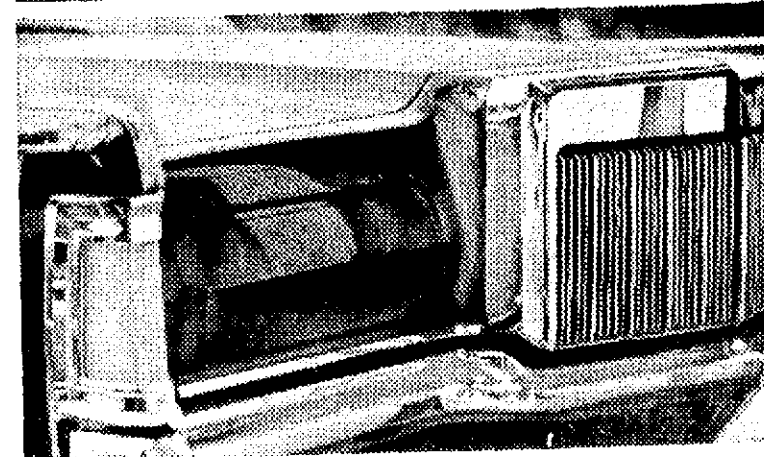

Sneak Peek At '68s

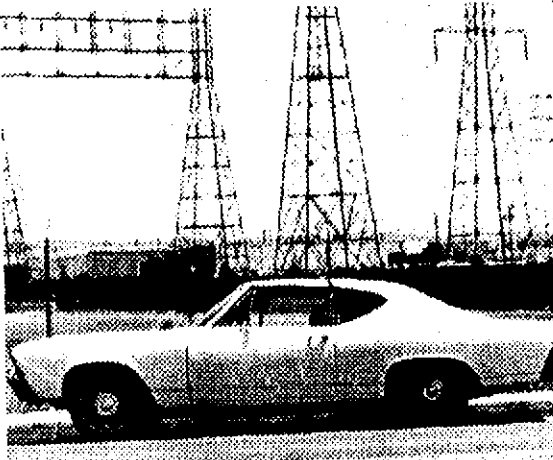

No less zealously than the Pentagon guards its secrets does the automobile industry hide its new creations until official unveiling in early fall. Models that venture beyond sanctioned walls are disguised with an abundance of tape, as shown on the '68 Chevelle at left, or hustled about in covered vans, such as the new Buick above. These pictures seen in the August issue of the magazine Motor Trend, show you can fool some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all nosy cameramen all of the time.

EVEN A SWAMP couldn't hide tests on the new Ford LTD, above, with a lower hood line and lights hidden behind the grille. Below is a new Ford Fairlane in a Mustang-type fastback.

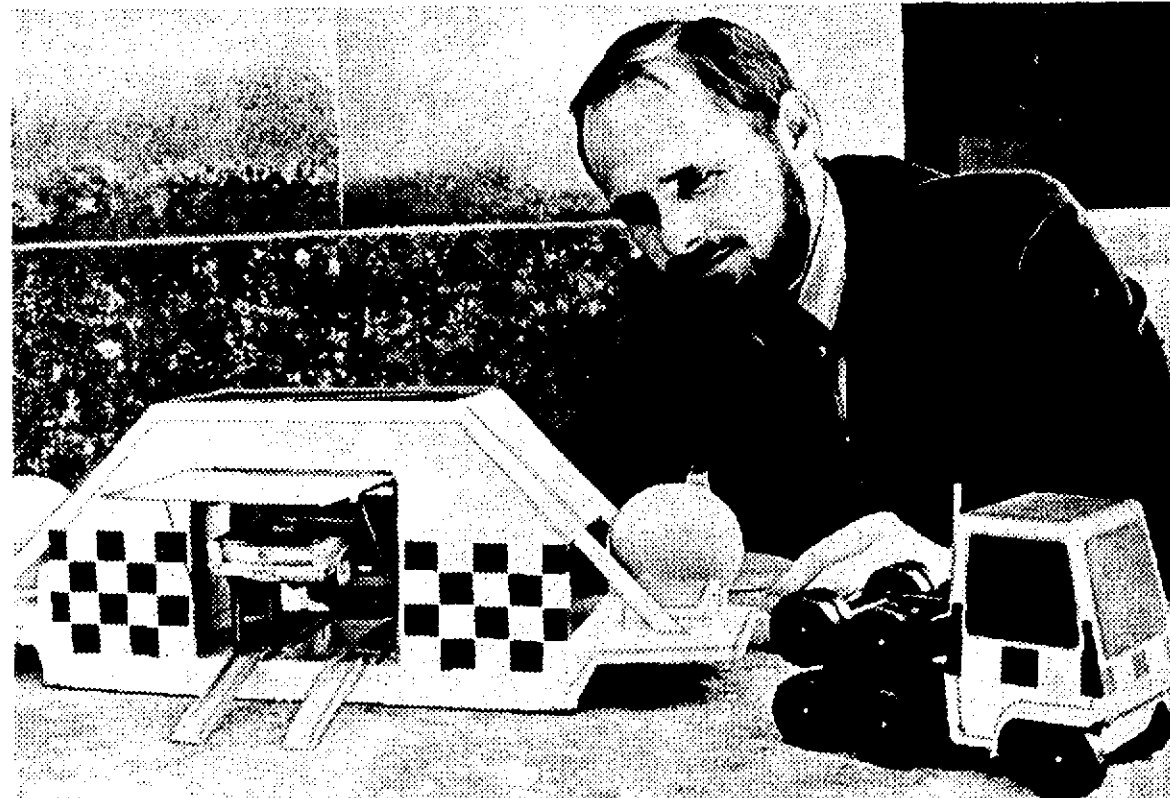

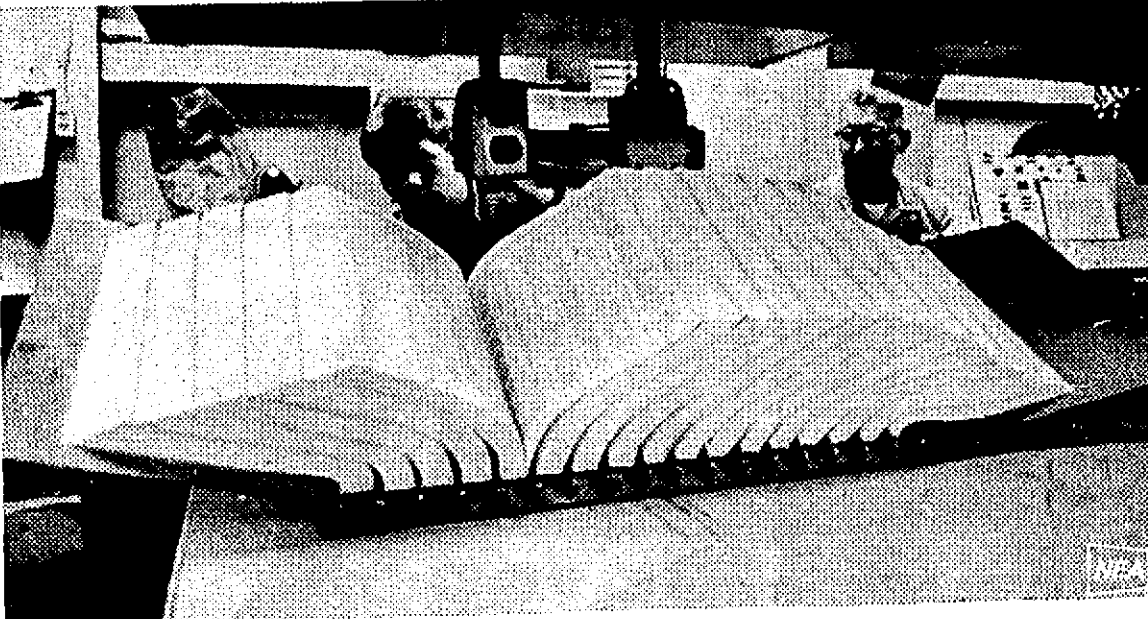

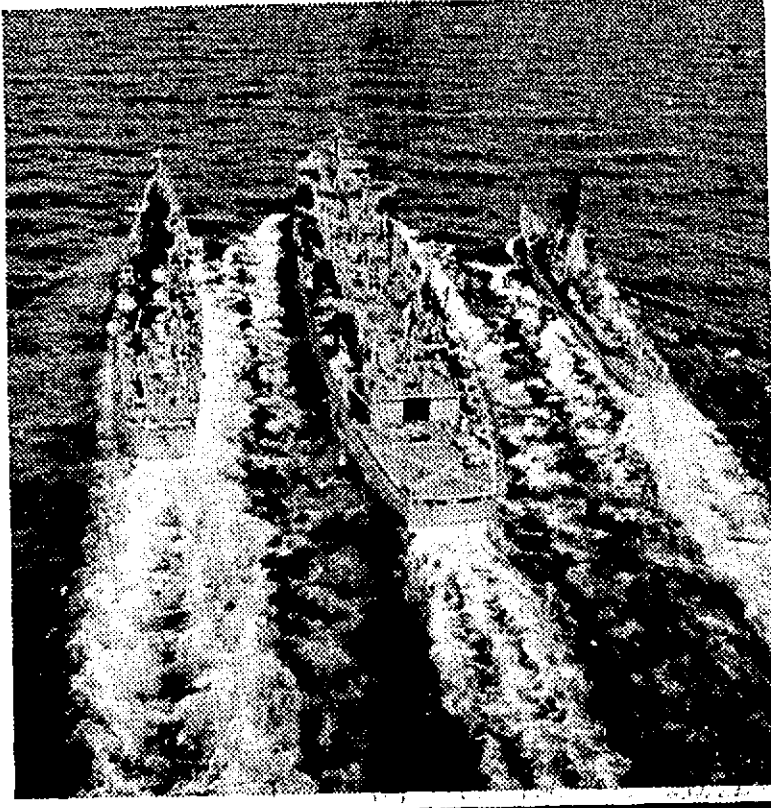

Chevrolet's number two seller, the Chevelle, is completely reworked for '68. Very streamlined, the beltline has been lowered, width is up about two inches and windshield is raked further back.

IN THE LUXURY MARKET is the Lincoln Continental Mark III, whose biggest change appears to be a Rolls Royce-style grille. The new car will be the first to use Ford's "thin-wall" 462-cubic-inch engine with about 350 h.p. Price will be in the $8,500 class.

Mid-Ocean Commissary

The Navy supply ship Sacramento, operating off the coast of Vietnam, is a floating storehouse ready to replenish ships of the Seventh Fleet with everything from bombs to ketchup bottles. Supplying is done on the go, with one or even two ships at a time, as seen at right. Below is the king-sized catalogue manned by cargo personnel for keeping track of the ship's voluminous stores.

PORTABLE SERVICE STATION is the design of Michael Nielsen, a Stanford University design student, who sees it as a solution for servicing cars for customers while they're at the office. The answer, he says, is a service station on wheels, towed to a parking lot so cars can be ready for their owners at the end of the day.

NOT MANY people under 30 can point to a range of mountains named after them. An exception is John McDonough, 27, young scientist for whom the McDonough Nunataks have been named in Antarctica. The range was so designated by the U.S. Board of Geographic Names of the National Science Foundation in honor of McDonough's 15 months of research accomplished in the frozen wastes for the National Bureau of Standards from 1961 to 1963.

U.S. raw steel production, although showing a steady long-term volume increase, has been rapidly outpaced by output in the rest of the world since World War II. From almost half total world production, the U.S. share has dropped to about a quarter.

WHITHER GOEST, HIPPIES?

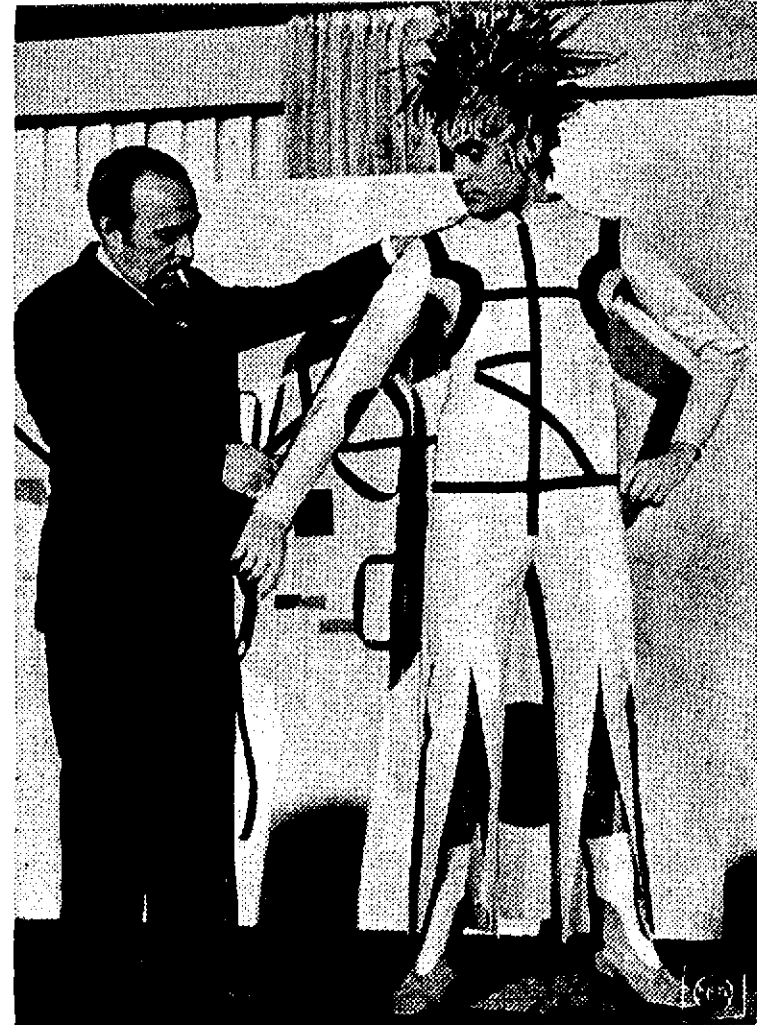

The hippie movement is spreading all over the U.S., but mecca for the "flower children" is still the Haight-Ashbury district in San Francisco. Yet even in this hippie headquarters the rebels against materialism are becoming big business, as big money moves in to capitalize on curiosity. Many hard-core hippies are moving out to seek nature in rural colonies.

Oriental religions greatly influence many hippies. Main philosophy for all flower children is a doctrine of peace and love.

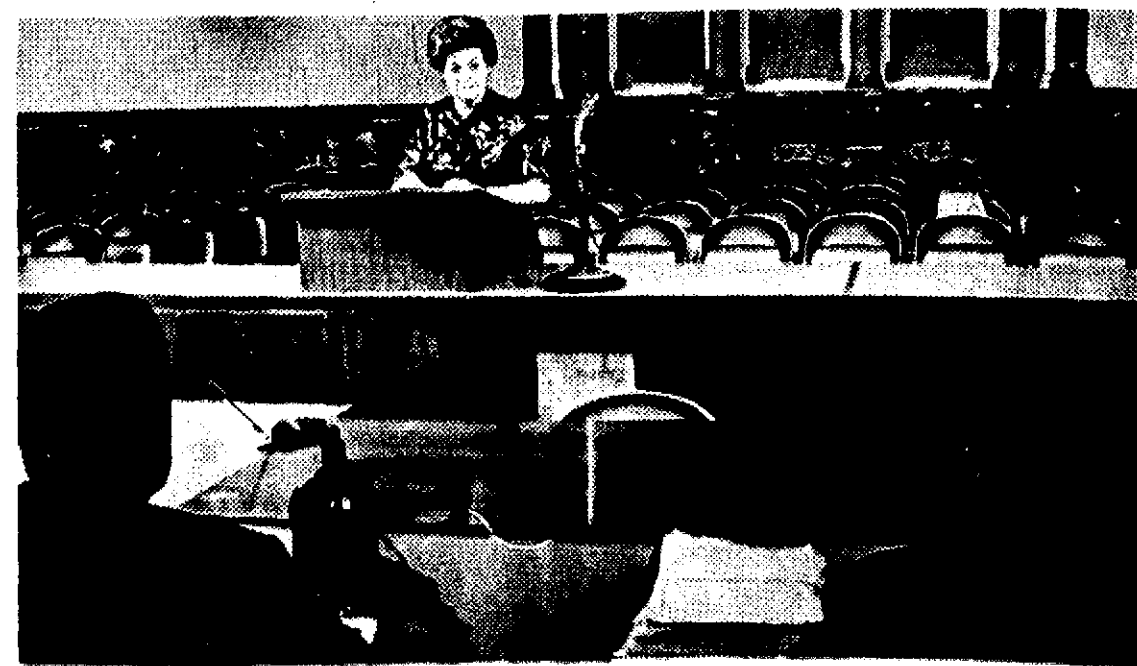

Sustenance for hippies is as uncomplicated as possible. Income may be from selling trinkets, or in the case of the girl at left, psychedelic literature. Eating is a relaxed affair, uncluttered by tables, chairs, or silverware. One form of entertainment is a community theater which gives free plays in the Golden Gate Park, above. Scorned by most of society, the hippie movement is nevertheless widespread. "Psychedelic" is now a household word, and its implications of consciousness-expansion influence today's advertising, fashion and teen-age music.

KICKY CLOTHES for the man of the future are seen like this to menswear designer Jacques Esterel. The slit legs and multicolored plastic tape trimmings may seem a bit far-fetched, but think what the colonists' reaction would have been to cuffed long pants and neckties.

LONE DISSENTER at a Board of Estimate and Apportionment hearing held by St. Louis, Mo., city officials was Mrs. William Kunes, a member of the city's League of Women Voters. Here she stands at a podium facing Mayor Alfonso J. Cervantes, left, and Donald Gunn, president of the Board of Aldermen, to discuss the tentative city budget for the new fiscal year. The rows of empty chairs emphasize the lack of citizen interest in the expenditures, with the notable exception of one.

Sirloin Kabobs for Labor Day Cookout

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food Editor

For the big holiday cookout select sirloin of beef, tender and rich. Then try these two "high hat" kabobs. A juicy way to say farewell to the good old summertime.

SIRLOIN KABOBS, ONION MARINADE

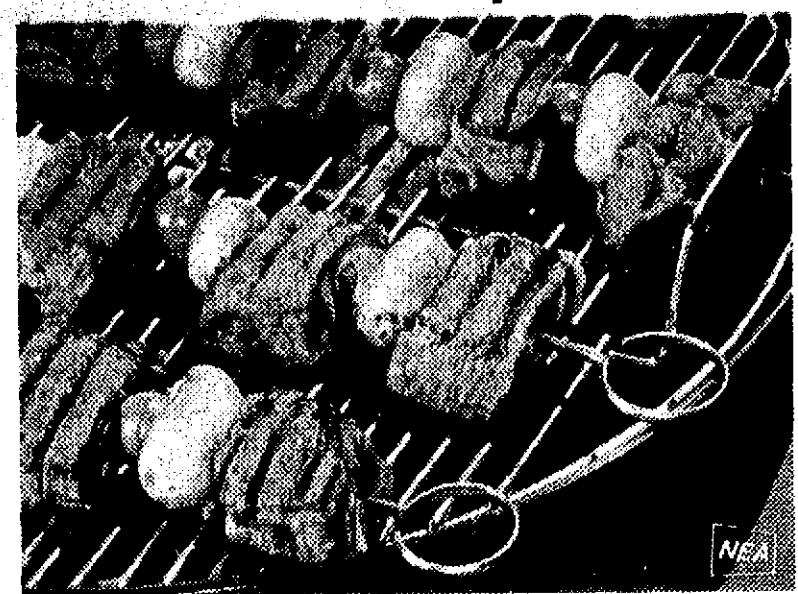

- 2 to 3 pounds beef sirloin steak cut into 1 1/2-inch cubes
- 1/2 cup salad oil
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon leaf oregano
- 1 green onion, finely chopped
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon coarsely ground pepper
- 12 medium-sized mushrooms
- 12 stuffed green olives
- 4 12-inch metal skewers

Combine salad oil, lemon juice, oregano, onion, salt and pepper. Pour marinade over meat. Cover and refrigerate 8 to 12 hours. Remove meat from marinade, reserving marinade. Thread meat, alternately with mushrooms and olives, on skewers, allowing 4 steak cubes, 3 mushrooms and 3 olives for each kabob. Place meat on grill 3 to 4 inches from heat. Brush meat, mushrooms and olives with reserved marinade during cooking. Broil 15 to 20 minutes, turning frequently, until browned. Four servings.

SIRLOIN-PEPPER KABOBS

- 1 beef sirloin steak, cut 1 1/2-inches thick
- 1/2 cup salad oil
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon onion powder
- 12 sweet red or green pepper squares, cut into 1 1/2-inch pieces

Remove bone and cut steak into sixteen 1 1/2-inch cubes. Combine oil, lemon juice, salt, paprika, dry mustard, sugar and onion powder. Add marinade to beef cubes. Cover and refrigerate 4 hours or overnight. Alternate meat cubes with pepper wedges. Place on grill making certain coals have burned down. Grill 15 to 20 minutes, turning occasionally, until browned. Four servings.

Wants Schools Under Boards

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Vocational Association has adopted a resolution opposing any legislation which would bypass education boards in establishing vocational schools with funds from the Ozarka program.

The association has approximately 1,200 members. The resolution urges the support of legislation which "will channel programs of education and training, other than those under the direction of institutions of higher learning, through established state boards of education."

A Senate subcommittee which is to meet today at Oklahoma City to conduct hearings on the type of legislation needed to implement the Ozarka Regional

Popularity of LBJ at a Low Ebb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those were President Johnson's golden days, 1965. This summer of 1967 is hot but for him they are the cold days, getting colder, if he pays attention to public opinion, and he does, it's enough to make him shiver.

Starting out in 1965 he had it all his own way, thanks to the 1964 elections. In Congress his Democrats swamped the Republicans, with 295 to 140 seats in the House, and 67 to 33 seats in the Senate, a two-thirds edge.

No wonder then, with these majorities and his ceaseless prodding, the Democratic-run Congress produced the most remarkable legislative year in history. And he had time for prodding in those days. The Vietnam war was in babyhood.

He had just begun the U.S. military buildup in 1965, with only 165,000 Americans there by the end of the year. He was criticized for being involved in the war at all, but his standing with the voters was high.

In the first six months of 1965, for example, when it was clear the troop buildup had begun in earnest, the Gallup poll showed public approval of the way he handled his job dropped from 71 to 64 percent.

But by June public approval was back up to 70 percent. This couldn't last unless Congress was able to repeat its amazing performance in 1966 or unless the war somehow could be brought to a quick and victorious end. Neither happened.

Congress coasted in 1966 and there were no victories in Vietnam. The war became a nightmare. The troop buildup went on. There was more discontent at home.

This was reflected in the 1966 elections, giving back to the Republicans 48 House seats, three Senate seats. The Johnson breeze in Congress died away. He prodded less as he became more preoccupied by the war. Congress dawdled this year, just as it did in 1966. The war criticism piled up on Johnson. The doves were still complaining. But so were the hawks now. They wanted Johnson to make the war tougher.

He began talking of a war dragging on indefinitely. The American death toll in Vietnam went up from 1,365 at the end of 1965 to over 12,500 now. And already there is a bad odor from the upcoming elections in Vietnam.

They were supposed to have been a shining symbol of how the United States, which claimed it was fighting the war to assure the South Vietnamese of self-determination, was helping the people establish a democratic society.

On top of the empty basket from Congress, the endless war, and Johnson's realization that he had to ask for a tax boost to pay for the war, he was drenched in the summer of 1967 with riots, the worst in history.

Few can doubt he wants to be re-elected 1968 but the Gallup and Harris polls over the weekend must have chilled his blood. Both reported that now only 39 per cent of those quizzed approved the way he handles the presidency.

Perhaps a major reason for this sour public reaction is lack of forceful leadership. Johnson and the country, instead of giving a sense of movement, seem to be marking time.

One example: he was criticized for not sending U.S. troops fast enough into Detroit to crush the riot although it still is not clear whether he or Michigan's Gov. George Romney was responsible for the delay.

But Johnson was far from forceful when he went on television to explain—he did the explaining at midnight—why he sent the troops at all. And he has not been forceful about the riots since.

He set up a commission to study riot problems with instructions not to make its final report until next summer.

When Johnson was Senate majority leader he knew no one could achieve anything by giving orders to the other 99 senators. Solutions were obtained through compromises, sometimes called a consensus. In the presidency Johnson has given few examples of decisive leadership. Rather, he gives the impression of using his Senate technique of seeking consensus, or trying to determine public reaction, before moving.

Big Population Boost
Beverly Hills, Calif., was incorporated as a city in 1914 with a population of only 674. Between 1922 and 1930, the population increased 2,500 per cent with the boom in the motion picture industry, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Washington's Sly Humor; Nature's Snafu

Latest grapevine report from the Washington scene is relayed to me by local contractor Ben Edwards.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman called up President Johnson and said:

"Boss, I've got something dreadful to report. On account of Daylight Saving we've got an extra hour of daylight—and it's killing off the Johnson grass."

Ben neglected to tell me what the President replied, but a strictly nonpolitical observation is that what we need is more of this kind of disaster.

Of course some wisenheimer will write me, laboriously pointing out that Daylight Saving merely rearranges Time—it doesn't change the total hours of daylight at all. If he does write me I won't argue the question; I'll merely point out that if he's so darn smart why doesn't he come up with something that will kill crab-grass?

If people and politicians have trouble making welfare programs reach the ones intended I have evidence that the very same problem exists in all Nature.

I have no squirrels around my house, so when I spotted a fox squirrel inspecting the premises I put out some whole peanuts and sunflower-seed hoping to persuade him to stick around.

The feed disappeared quickly enough. Naturally I wanted to know whether the squirrel was getting it. A friend told me I could find out by inspecting the pan. He said a squirrel tackling a peanut would leave the shucks in the pan, but birds would fly away with a peanut and shuck it off the premises.

Well, the peanuts disappeared—shucks and all. I got out the binoculars and decided to check the truth of what my friend told me. He was right.

I had two adult blue-jays in the pan and a young one standing sentry duty under a neighboring bush. A blue-jay reminds me of what an American humorist once wrote about a certain man. He said: "He was the kind of a guy you had to know real well in order to hate his guts!"

Crop-dusting Pilot Killed

CORNING, Ark. (AP) — A crop-dusting plane crashed and burned about 3½ miles southwest of here Wednesday evening killing the pilot, Jerry Lee Rhodes, 25, of Cash.

Clay County officers said the crash occurred on the farm of Junior Gibbs. The cause of the crash was not known.

Stolen Gun May Explode

MALVERN, Ark. (AP) — Authorities in Hot Spring County said Wednesday that a .38-caliber pistol, which was loaded with .357 magnum shells when it was stolen last Sunday, may explode if fired.

Officers said the gun and a box of .357 magnum shells were taken from the car of Dr. Robert White of Malvern while he was shooting targets at a gravel pit near here.

Former State Official Dies

TYLER, Tex. (AP) — John T. Truemper Sr., a native of Helena, Ark., and a former comptroller for the state of Arkansas, died here Wednesday.

He had been comptroller of the Mayer and Schmidt Department Store at Tyler since 1958 and was a former director of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. in Arkansas. He lived at Little Rock from 1932 to 1958.

U.S. Relations

With France Problem
BONN, Germany (AP) — West German Foreign Minister Willy Brandt said today relations between the United States and France are increasingly posing a problem for his government.

"This will make our foreign policy more complicated," Brandt said on his return from the United States.

He took part in two days of talks between President Johnson and Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger in Washington.

Increase in SS Tax Inevitable

B EDMOND LeBRETON
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic and Republican leaders have forged a rare union to assure passage of legislation to boost Social Security benefits and taxes.

If the bill finally is enacted, the average benefit paid a retired couple would go up from $145 to $164 a month. Each of the current 24.2 million beneficiaries would receive at least a 12½ per cent increase. The range of benefits for a single retired person, now $44 to $142 a month, would rise to $50 to $159.80.

Taxes would go up as well—a maximum of $44 next year for a worker earning as much as $7,600 and for his employer. The scale would rise more in future years.

While official endorsement of the bill by the House Republican leadership Wednesday assured passage, there is opposition to some portions of it and the Senate is expected to work over the measure extensively, leaving its final shape to be determined by a conference of the two chambers.

The House is considering the bill under procedures that allow only a yes or no vote without amendments.

There is expected to be criticism, however, of a number of provisions.

One is a limitation affecting especially New York, on the extent to which a state can open up federally-aided health care—medical, not medicare—to persons above the poverty level.

Another is a series of measures designed to tighten rules on aid to families with dependent children and to require adults to take jobs or prepare for them whenever possible. A proposed limit on admission of additional families to the program has drawn the fire of John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare.

In addition to the benefit increases, the bill would allow Social Security recipients to earn somewhat more money without having their benefits cut. And it would provide benefits for widows of deceased workers as young as 50, if the widows were physically unable to work.

Meanwhile the administration had two more economic indicators to cite as support for President Johnson's proposed 10 per cent income tax surcharge. The House Ways and Means Committee has suspended its hearings on the tax measure until action on the Social Security measure is completed.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Wednesday that July marked the first increase in industrial production this year. And the Commerce Department announced a strong 10.8 per cent surge in homebuilding during the same month.

Rockefeller, Hawkins in Friendly Meet

MORRILTON, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller walked into the office of Conway County Sheriff Marlin Hawkins, a longtime political foe, Wednesday and noticed an autographed picture of former Gov. Orval E. Faubus.

"I'll have to send you one of mine," Rockefeller said to Hawkins.

"Heck, Governor, I can go down to the Welfare Office and get one of yours," Hawkins said. Hawkins' nephew was recently dismissed as Conway County Welfare director by Welfare Commissioner Lynn Blaylock, who was appointed by Rockefeller.

Rockefeller and Hawkins chatted amicably for a while Wednesday on one of Rockefeller's regional tours of the state.

RFK Acts to Restore Aid Cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, backing the Johnson administration, moved today to head off partially a cut in funds for the Alliance for Progress.

He said he was doing so to honor the pledge his late brother, President John F. Kennedy, made when the plan of aid to Latin America was established six years ago.

The New York Democrat sponsored an amendment to restore $72 million of the $172 million the Foreign Relations Committee cut from the Alliance authorization for fiscal 1967-68.

Kennedy worked closely with top administration officials in drafting the amendment, his office said, and they told him a $72 million increase would cover spending plans for this year.

The Kennedy proposal would bring the authorization to $650 million.

Six years ago, the senator said, President Kennedy pledged to Latin America that this country would join in "a New Alliance for Progress to assist free men and free governments in casting off the chains of poverty."

"It is to honor that pledge that I offer this amendment," the senator continued.

He commented in a speech prepared for delivery in the Senate.

The Senate in its fourth day of debate on a $2.7 billion foreign aid bill, which was cut $737 million below Johnson's requests by the Foreign Relations Committee.

Rising costs of the Vietnam war and domestic problems including violence in cities were cited by committee members as reasons for the cutbacks.

Arkla Plans $13 Million Expansion

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. can proceed with its plan to construct a 103-mile gas transmission line from Logan County, Ark., to Jane, Mo., W. R. Stephens, chairman of the board and president of Arkla, said Wednesday that the Federal Power Commission had authorized the construction.

Stephens said expenditures for the transmission and other facilities would total about $13.5 million. Arkla applied for permission to build the pipeline and sell an average of 100 million cubic feet of gas daily to Cities Service Gas Co., of Oklahoma City almost four years ago.

Stephens said Arkla would receive minimum total revenues of $164 million during the next 20 years from the contract. No construction timetable has been set.

Five Places Padlocked

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — A spokesman for the Arkansas State Police said early Thursday morning that state troopers had padlocked five establishments in Hot Springs which are thought to contain gambling devices.

The spokesman said both the front and back doors of the establishments were padlocked some time after midnight.

Warrants will be obtained this morning by the State Police and the establishments will be opened the spokesman said. Lynn A. Davis, the new director of the State Police, reportedly accompanied the troopers to the establishments.

House-Passed Rights Measure Likely to Meet Death in Senate

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has overwhelmingly passed a bill making it a federal crime to harm or interfere with persons trying to exercise their civil rights, and extended the protection to include police and firemen working in riot areas.

But the bill, largely the same as a portion of the 1966 civil rights bill which died in the Senate, may be killed there again.

The amendment providing federal protection for police and firemen was supported by members angered by this summer's city riots, in which several police officers and firefighters were injured. Some were killed.

But the bill, largely the same as a portion of the 1966 civil rights bill which died in the Senate, may face a similar fate.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., whose Senate Judiciary subcommittee began hearings on the same measure Aug. 1, said then it "cannot stand the constitutional light of day" under the 14th Amendment.

Senate sources rated the bill's chances of clearing the full Judiciary Committee as zero. They said an attempt might be made to bypass the committee and put the House-passed version on the floor for debate, but forecast a Southern filibuster if that tactic was used.

In the House, a majority of both parties supported the bill, which sailed through Wednesday 326 to 93 after a series of relatively minor amendments were adopted and two major ones were turned back.

The bill would make it a federal crime for a person to interfere with, injure or intimidate anyone because of his race, color, religion, national origin or political affiliation and because he is or has been engaging in certain protected activities.

These include voting, attending public schools, using public accommodations and public facilities, serving on state and local juries and participating in federally assisted programs.

Penalties would be up to one year and a $1,000 fine, except that serious bodily injury could bring up to 10 years and $10,000 and death could result in life imprisonment.

The most serious limitation adopted to the civil rights bill appeared to be one proposed by the Justice Department and offered by Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., of the House Judiciary Committee.

It requires that the punishable acts must be committed both because of race, color, religion, political affiliation or national origin and because the victim is or has been engaging in the protected activities.

Rep. William T. Cahill, R-N.J., said the amendment, accepted by voice vote, would make it harder for U.S. attorneys to gain convictions.

Indicted on Sodomy Charge

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — A Federal Grand Jury indicted Pasquale A. Massi, 63, an alleged Cosa Nostra leader, on three counts Wednesday including sodomy, conspiracy to commit sodomy and attempted bribery.

Massi, of Cherry Hill, N.J., is accused of committing sodomy with a 16-year-old Negro in the Hot Springs Bath House Row area June 11. He is also accused of offering a bribe to David J. Essex, a park ranger, who allegedly witnessed the act.

Massi did not come to Hot Springs to testify. He was bound over to the federal grand jury following a recent preliminary hearing conducted by U.S. Commissioner Signum Rasmussen.

Police Commissioner Frank Rivzo of Philadelphia, Penn., has identified Massi as a lieutenant to Angelo Bruno, the alleged head of the Cosa Nostra in Philadelphia. Massi, a native of Teramo, Italy, was naturalized at Camden, N.J. in August of 1947.

Massi's indictment was one of 26 returned by the grand jury.

82 Die, 748 Wounded in Past Week

SAIGON (AP) — American combat casualties in the Vietnam war last week dropped to their lowest number since last January, reflecting a lull in major, sustained ground fighting, the U.S. Command announced today.

It said 82 Americans were killed and 748 wounded.

But a new series of small, fierce scattered skirmishes that could develop into something bigger was reported by U.S. Marines rooting out Communist troops in hills west of the coastal plain of Tam Ky, about 350 miles northeast of Saigon.

In the air war over North Vietnam, bad weather limited U.S. pilots to a below average 111 missions Wednesday.

Heavy clouds hung over the Hanoi-Haliphong area and air strikes were concentrated in the southern panhandle stretching from south of Hanoi to the 17th parallel that divides North and South Vietnam.

The command said 1,043 Communist soldiers were killed this week, the lowest figure this year.

The toll of American dead last week was the lowest since the week ending last Jan. 7 when 67 U.S. soldiers were killed. The wounded toll was the lowest since the 716 in the week ending Jan. 21. The over-all toll of 830 killed and wounded last week was the lowest since Jan. 7 when 546 casualties were reported.

Last week's toll compares with 146 Americans killed and 1,064 wounded the previous week, slightly below this year's weekly average.

Records showed 12,497 Americans have died in combat in Vietnam from Jan. 1, 1961, through Saturday, while another 76,630 U.S. troops have been wounded.

The U.S. Command said that with the exception of one significant engagement, contacts last week were generally light and scattered and on a small unit level throughout South Vietnam last week.

The lull in major sustained ground fighting has been evident since early last month. There have been exceptions, when Communist forces ambushed U.S. units, inflicted heavy casualties, then pulled out quickly. Some military strategists believe the Communists are resupplying and regrouping during the lull.

The South Vietnamese armed forces announced losses of 283 dead and 683 wounded last week, above their average. Their high casualties stemmed largely from isolated actions.

JOHN MAULDIN
CAMP PENDLETON, CALIF.
(FHTNC) Aug. 7—Marine Private John J. Mauldin, son of Mrs. Bridle L. Mauldin of 1000 S. Laurel St., Hope, Ark., has completed four weeks of individual combat training at this Marine Corps Base.
During his more than 200 hours of training, he learned about weapons and combat techniques from combat veteran instructors. They taught him how to conduct combat patrols, detect and remove mines and booby traps and use the standard Marine Corps infantry weapons.
He will now receive at least four weeks of specialist training before being assigned to his first permanent unit. Marines going to combat units will get detailed training in the particular combat skill they are designated for. Those who are going into technical fields will receive their advanced training at one of a variety of technical schools throughout the country.

Claim Bomb Practice Still Used

By BOB HORTON
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a hint of an old, enormously expensive game going on among Navy pilots operating off North Vietnam. The goals: get rid of every bomb and fly often to keep up combat records.
The Navy officially says nobody's playing it, but a former aviator says "it was common knowledge all the time I was aboard," and a ranking admiral says he got word from the top that such reported antics weren't to be tolerated.
Privately, some military officers say the practice went on in World War II and Korea and is still going on to some extent.

"About a third of our ordnance was dumped in the water, and that's a conservative estimate," said Alex Waier, 32, a chemical company analyst in Midland, Mich. His remarks were carried Tuesday by the Bay City (Mich.) Times in a copyrighted story.
Waier, an Al Skyraider pilot aboard the carrier Ticonderoga until his discharge after nine years' service in February, said pilots were told to beat the other carriers' records on numbers of bombing missions.
"We would zip up and down the coast and unload, or dump them in the water," Waier said. "That way, the carrier would get credit for a sortie."
Waier said Navy pilots were risking their lives against cheap or worthless targets and often got sent out in dangerously foul weather on what he called meaningless missions.
Except for targets in Hanoi or Haiphong, Waier said, there are few profitable sites to hit in North Vietnam.
Within hours the Navy produced some top combat-proven officers to explain Waier's remarks.
Rear Adm. D.C. Richardson, commander of Task Force 77 on Yankee Station off Vietnam until last May, denied there was any formal sortie race among Navy pilots but he indicated that plenty of enthusiastic competition was underway.
Adm. David L. McDonald, former chief of naval operations, "took me aside before I went out and said 'I've had word of sortie races and want no part of it,'" Richardson said.
Richardson said top Navy people had "been aware of this thing" for the past two years.
The admiral disputed Waier's statements about bomb-dumping, but only in degree and reasons.
Richardson said because of bad weather Navy pilots sometimes fail to reach assigned targets and head back to ship with full bomb loads.
As a precaution against accidental explosions on deck the pilot routinely releases his ordnance over water before landing.
The admiral estimated this deliberate unloading amounts to about one-twentieth of munitions expenditures by carrier planes—or roughly 13,000 to 15,000 tons of bombs and rockets a month.
By the most conservative Pentagon estimates, this runs into millions of dollars a month, Richardson said there was "a

LARRY L. MAY
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Airman Larry L. May, whose mother is Mrs. Helen H. Cogbill of Spring Hill Road, Hope, Ark., has been selected for technical training at Lackland AFB, Tex., as a U.S. Air Force air policeman.
His new school is part of the Air Training Command which conducts hundreds of specialized courses to provide technically trained personnel for the nation's aerospace force.
Airman May is a 1966 graduate of Hope High School.
His father, Jewell F. May, resides at 608 Elm St., Hope.
"There's a touch of truth" in Waier's remarks in the sense that competition is strong among the Navy carriers which rotate two at a time off North Vietnam in sending planes to blast Communist targets. He attributed it to "a bunch of gung-ho lads."
Richardson denied the Navy sends pilots against worthless targets. He said it sometimes might appear so, and cited a case where a pilot was ordered to hit a previously bombed-out bridge that appeared to be unusable. He said intelligence photos have shown that such apparently broken bridges often are made usable with pontoon stands hidden beneath the foliage of riverbanks.
Adm. Roy L. Johnson, commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, denied in Honolulu that planes and lives are being lost because of intra-service rivalry.
"There is no sortie race, Johnson said. "Of course, there is healthy competition among the carriers, but comments of the type made by former Lt. Waier represent an isolated case."
Another naval officer, Cmdr. Robert Ferguson, called Waier's remarks "a bunch of rot"—especially those about pilots being risked in bad weather.

Many Reach Way Beyond Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (AP)—There's plenty at home to use up their energy since the civil rights movement is bogged down, but some of its leaders are reaching way beyond civil rights for something to attack or denounce.
Latest example: The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee—whose past and present leaders are a couple of Negro agitators, Stokely Carmichael and H. Rap Brown—is now accusing the Jews of atrocities against the Arabs.
Before that Dr. Martin Luther King, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was denouncing American involvement in the Vietnamese war and calling this country "the greatest purveyor of violence in the world."
He called for a coalition of the antiwar and civil rights forces.
In a recent letter SNCC charged Zionists seized Palestine through terror, force and massacres. The publication carried two photographs purporting to show massacres in the Gaza strip in 1956. SNCC denies it's anti-Semitic.
That's not the way Irwin Shulman, southeastern director of the Anti-Defamation League, sees it. He says the whole business smacks of anti-Semitism. He said the published photographs previously appeared in Arab propaganda publications.
And, he said, the SNCC charges represent the total propaganda line taken by the Arabs with some changes which, he said, reflect Soviet views.
Ralph Featherston, SNCC's program director, said his organization had received no financial help from the Arabs. But it does need financial help. The newsletter appealed for funds in an announcement saying: "Help, help, we're sinking fast."
It would be interesting to know what kind of financial shape King's organization is in. About a month after his attack on the war his executive assistant, The Rev. Andrew J. Young, said, "I think we are in a rather difficult period now. But we are not worried. We are getting along."
After King's attack on the war, Freedom House—an organization whose directors include former Illinois Sen. Paul Douglas, a famous liberal; Roy Wilkins of NAACP, and Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., the only Negro in the Senate—issued a paper attacking King in turn.
It criticized him for lending his "mantle of respectability" to a peace movement which, it said, contained "well-known Communist allies and luminaries of the hate-American left." King denied Communists influenced his war stand.
But now King, overshadowed for months by the more bizarre antics of Brown and Carmichael, has another idea which, if it got out of control, might cause more trouble than anything seen in this country in 1967.
He has called for nonviolent programs of organized, mass civil disobedience as a weapon for fighting racial discrimination and poverty. For example: coupling Negro school boycotts with mass sit-ins at factories to demand jobs.
And he has another idea: a massive camp-out in Washington. He said this would mean taking people from Mississippi and camping in the capital while refusing to eat or move until action was taken by Congress to ease slum conditions and economic hardships for Negroes.
This demonstration, he said, would be similar to the Bonus Expeditionary Force of World War I veterans who camped in Washington in 1932 and were routed by U.S. troops without getting what they wanted: a bonus from Congress.
But the kind of camp-out in Washington King seems to have in mind could wind up in a riot at a time when riots are in the air. For example: If the campers tried to camp indefinitely on government property they could expect to be thrown out. Nobody should know that better than King.
Just last June the Supreme Court upheld the conviction of King and seven others in Birmingham for disobeying a court injunction obtained by city officials to prevent picketing. Those officials said they wanted to prevent the picketing in a situation which could lead to violence.
The first Inter-American Conference was held in 1826 at Panama City, with Simon Bolivar presiding.

CHARLES ARNOLD
CAMP PENDLETON, CALIF.
(FHTNC) Aug. 7—Marine Private Charles W. Arnold, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lile Arnold of Route 3, Hope, Ark., has completed four weeks of individual combat training at this Marine Corps Base.
During his more than 200 hours of training, he learned about weapons and combat techniques from combat veteran instructors. They taught him how to conduct combat patrols, detect and remove mines and booby traps and use the standard Marine Corps infantry weapons.
He will now receive at least four weeks of specialist training before being assigned to his first permanent unit. Marines going to combat units will get detailed training in the particular combat skill they are designated for. Those who are going into technical fields will receive their advanced training at one of a variety of technical schools throughout the country.

Davis Sees Decision in a Week

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Lynn A. Davis, in his first speech since taking over as State Police director said Wednesday he would probably learn next week whether he could continue to hold the position.
Davis' eligibility has been questioned and a friendly suit has been filed in an attempt to determine whether Davis is legally qualified.
Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell has said that he does not think Davis, a former FBI agent, meets the residency requirements.
Davis told a group of officers Wednesday that he did not contemplate any change in current State Police procedures and that he welcomed any ideas, even impractical ones, concerning improvement of the agency.
Davis said he felt persons who enforce the law should display more loyalty, eagerness and "the go-go attitude." Davis said officers should have enthusiasm and a constantly questioning outlook because "the only difference in a rut and in a grave is just the depth."

CALENDAR OF EVENTS
There will be a dance at the Hope City Park Friday, August 18th from 9:00 - 1:00. Glenn Arnold and the Grand Pree's will play.
Admission is $1.00 in advance and $1.25 at the door. Tickets may be purchased at the office at City Park.

Nominations Invited for ASC Posts

ASC Community committees should always be the "best people available," according to R.B. Arnold, Chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee. Slates of nominees for membership on ASC community committees soon will be established at the ASCS county office. The committee election will be held the third week in September.
"The committee system is the backbone of the farm programs," the Chairman declared. "Its responsibilities include the conservation of natural resources, the stabilization of agricultural commodities and price-support activities which protect and improve farm income. We need the best possible cross-section of farmers to insure effective administration of the various measures."
In Hempstead County, Mr. Arnold explained, 625 farmers took part last year in one or more programs administered by the ASC committees. Funds disbursed under the Committees' supervision amounted to $235,000. Of this amount, $23,000 was for price-support loans aimed at increasing market returns above what farmers would receive on an unsupported market.
Last year, also, 13,257 acres of farmland were improved under the Agricultural Conservation Program cost-sharing arrangement. The total investment in conservation was about $121,000 with half coming from the participating farmer and the balance from ACP.
The Chairman pointed out that lists of eligible voters in each community are available in the ASCS county office. He explained that any local resident who is eligible to take part in an ASCS farm program may vote in the community committee elections, and he may hold office as a committeeman regardless of race, color, creed, or national origin. Further information regarding qualifications of committeemen is available to vote in the community committee elections also have the right to nominate by petition candidates for committee membership any farmer who is eligible and who has indicated that he is willing to serve. Such petitions, each one nominating one farmer and signed by six or more eligible voters, may be filed at the county office any time before August 25, 1967. Eligible voters sign as many petitions as they wish. Additional nominations may be made by the incumbent ASC community and county committees. A recent change in the nominating procedure seeks to insure fair and impartial elections by reducing vote splintering of minority group candidates.
This year, for the first time, the election of ASC community committees throughout the nation will be held during the third week in September. Previously such elections had been held at various times in different States from July through December.
In Hempstead County the election will be held between September 11 and September 21 by mail. Each community election will choose three community committeemen and two alternates. The regular members elected will serve as delegates to the county convention, where farmers will be elected to fill vacancies on the ASC county committee.

WIN AT BRIDGE

One No-Trump Awkward Bid

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

In a duplicate game a one no-trump doubled contract is apt to produce a lot of fireworks. If declarer can bring it home he usually gets a top or near top. If he gets set more than one trick he gets a very bad score while one down doubled but not vulnerable is likely to be just about average.

East's takeout double of one spade is not recommended for steady consumption. He had passed originally but the fact that he had passed had not changed one card in his hand. He still had 10 high card points and poor distribution.

South might well have passed one spade and let his opponents take over but South decided to try one no-trump with his 13 points and was up to West to do something. West made an unpopular double.

It was 100 per cent unpopular. West didn't like it much. North hated it but didn't think he had any place to go. East didn't like it but was sure he had no place to go and South surely didn't like but knew he had no place to go.

West opened his jack of diamonds and it was up to the defense to set declarer two tricks if they could work it out and South wanted to get out for down one if possible. The defense was too good and it wasn't possible. West's jack of diamonds held the first trick and he continued with the four. East won with the queen and led the nine of clubs. It was allowed to hold and he continued with the eight.

South won this trick and led the queen of spades. West covered with the king and South let it hold.

The defense had four tricks in and proceeded to take the king of clubs, the ace of hearts and two more diamonds for that 300-point plus.

A—Bid four clubs. Your partner has shown the ace of spades but warned you that the diamond suit is wide open. You must not bid three no-trump but might well have jumped to five clubs.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding two clubs your partner has doubled one spade. What do you do now?

SHOWBEAT

By DICK KLEINER
Hollywood Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

HOLLYWOOD—(NEA)—"I call it The Purple Palace," said Nancy Sinatra, leading the way into her dressing room at MGM, where she is shooting "Speedway" with Elvis Presley. It was a good name; the little room had vivid purple carpet, lavender wallpaper and all the trimmings were in various shades of purple.

Nancy wanted to play some cuts of her latest Reprise album, "Country My Way," and it's a good one. Lee Hazelwood, her private Svengali, listened, too, his bushy mustache going up and down in time to the beat.

"She's the first pop singer," Hazelwood said, "who dared to do a straight country album—all the others had a big orchestral backing, but Nancy had nothing but steel guitars and electric violins."

Hazelwood deserves a lot of credit. He took a girl who had made a lot of records over a five-year period without making much of a ripple. (Nancy gets angry when people say the only reason she made it is because she's Frank's daughter, pointing out logically that the relationship didn't help her before.) And he turned her into a smash hit, simply by getting her to project sexy toughness in her singing.

It took some doing, because that isn't Nancy Sinatra at all. She's basically a gentle girl, polite and friendly, and as much like the girl who says "These Boots Are Made For Walking" as Jack Benny is like his miserly image.

But it worked, and now Nancy Sinatra is a big star. The success of her records has helped her in other fields, too, and her current lead opposite Elvis the Great is her biggest so far.

Professionally, she's happy with the way her life is going. But privately it's another matter.

"What I really want from life," she says, "is to marry and have a bunch of kids. I'll always work some, of course—that's why I'm working so hard now, so I'll be established and be able to pick and choose."

"Life is hard for a girl. She has to ask herself the question, 'What do you really want out of life?' I had to face that myself. I tried a lot of things—I sold clothes in a department store one summer, I tried college, I went to secretarial school. I was trying to find something."

She didn't find it. So she went into show business. She had been around it all her life, of course, and it came naturally. And she had a natural talent, although it took awhile for her to find her proper channel, with Hazelwood's help.

But she still hasn't found that extracurricular thing, the right man.

"I want a man," she says, "who is dedicated to his work. It would be better if he was in, or near, show business, otherwise he wouldn't understand what I want to do. But he must be serious about his work. I couldn't respect a man who wasn't serious about his work."

They called her back to the set. She was doing her big solo, a Hazelwood song called "Your Groovy Self." The gentle girl vanished and there stood the new public image of Nancy Sinatra, blonde and sexy and tough.

Off-camera, Lee Hazelwood watched the creature he had created, with satisfaction.

4 More Bodies Found in Fairbanks

By WARD SIMS
FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — The brown flood waters of the Chena River receded today, but at a pace so slow that the city's 15,000 evacuees were not expected to begin returning to their damaged homes and businesses before Saturday. Only a tiny fraction of them carried flood insurance, officials said.

The bodies of four more victims were found Wednesday, disaster headquarters and state police reported, bringing Alaska's flood death toll to seven. Two bodies were discovered in the city and two more in Tok, a river community on the Alaska Highway.

Police conducting a house-to-house search earlier reported three deaths including that of a young child.

The victims were not identified and the cause of death was not given.

About 95 per cent of Fairbanks' buildings were affected by the flood, but an insurance executive estimated just two per cent of the community's property owners had flood insurance. The situation prompted calls for immediate federal rehabilitation funds and low cost loans to businessmen and homeowners.

"It's much more than I expected it to be," said Creath Tooley, western regional director of the President's Office of Emergency Planning, who toured the city of 30,000 by boat and helicopter Wednesday. "You just don't expect to see a town inundated such as this."

Damage was placed at about $200 million.

Gov. Walter Hickel, calling for Fairbanks to be designated a federal disaster area, said he thought Saturday would be the earliest time residents could return to their homes—if rain holds off.

Cloudy skies settled above the city today and the Weather Bu reau forecast a few light showers. "If those clouds drop more rain we could be right back in trouble," said Mayor H. A. Boucher.

The danger of uncontrolled fire, which had officials on edge Wednesday after five buildings burned in the downtown area, tapered off with no additional fires reported today.

The Chena, sent on a rampage by more than 5 1/2 inches of rain during four days, was down about six inches from Tuesday's high point when up to nine feet of muddy water rushed into the business district.

At peak flow, Geological Survey engineers said, the river was pouring through Fairbanks at a rate of 15-billion gallons a day—enough to supply the city of New York with water for about two weeks.

Police, conducting a house-to-house check, reported three confirmed deaths, including that of a young child. The dead were not identified and there was no official word as to whether they drowned or died from other causes.

Hickel, with Tooley at his side, told newsmen that state and local governments were nearing the limits of their financial ability to cope with the disaster.

"I would think," Hickel said, "that under the circumstances it would be only natural for federal aid to be forthcoming."

Hickel and Boucher both stressed the need for a quick and massive effort to complete reconstruction and repair before the arrival of winter weather.

Hickel said he had given some consideration to a special session of the legislature to meet problems of the disaster, but he said no decision had been made as yet.

"If we find it necessary to call the legislature into special session to meet the situation here, we wouldn't hesitate to call one," Hickel said.

Walker Case Set Aug. 28

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Federal District Judge J. Smith Henley said Wednesday he would hear the case of James Dean Walker on Aug. 28.

Judge Henley took the Walker case under jurisdiction Wednesday after refusing a day earlier to follow through on a request by the state attorney general's office that Walker's petition to reinstate his case be dismissed.

Walker is currently serving a life sentence for the 1963 fatal shooting of Jerrell P. Vaughan, a North Little Rock patrolman. Walker, 26, had asked federal court for a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge Henley took the case under his jurisdiction after Circuit Judge William J. Kirby said he probably would not be able to hear Walker's case before the end of March, 1968.

NONVIOLENCE CAN BE A ROUGH ROAD discovered hundreds of London hippies who took over the Alexandria Palace for an all night demonstration of nonviolent "flower power" recently. A number of intruders visited the "love-in" and started bashing the hippies with chairs.

There's Gold in Some of That Money

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There's gold in them thar silver certificates.

In silver dollars, too. And even certain nickels are worth more than 5 cents.

Dealers are advertising their willingness to pay from 25 to 30 per cent over the face value of $1, $5 and $10 silver certificates.

When trading in silver dollars begins on the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday, the asking price for a 60-pound sack bulging with 1,000 uncirculated cartwheels is expected to be about $2,000.

And one dealer says he's collecting nickels minted from 1942 through 1945 because they contain enough silver and copper to make them worth more than 5 cents.

The law of supply and demand is responsible for the current ferment in silver.

Certain coins always have been worth more than their face value because they were scarce and because a collector was willing to pay a premium for them to fill holes in his collection.

Silver coins—dimes, quarters, halves, dollars—command a premium for their value to collectors rather than their metallic value.

This was because the U.S. Treasury for years had held the price of American silver at $1.29 an ounce, an artificial ceiling that ignored the law of supply and demand.

The formula worked, however, even though silver consumption in recent years began outstripping production. In 1966, silver consumption in the United amounted to a record of about 150 million ounces, an increase of 9 1/2 per cent over 1965.

Despite this growing demand for silver by such industries as the photographic, sterlingware, electronics and electrical, the government held the price, but the pressure was getting heavy.

As the demand for silver continued to outstrip supply, the Treasury finally abandoned its $1.29 an ounce silver price in mid-July. The price of an ounce of silver since has soared as high as $1.82.

That's why dealers can afford to pay a premium.

Silver certificates can be exchanged for the metal at a rate of $1.29 an ounce. Every such dollar certificate brings a packet containing about 0.77 of an ounce of silver, which is sold at the $1.82 market price, is worth about $1.40. If the dealer pays $1.30 for the silver certificate his profit is 10 cents on a dollar.

Louisiana Marchers Mark Time

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The civil rights march by Louisiana Negroes beset by increasing violence, marked time today. Its leader A.Z. Young, said they would do "a little rethinking."

The march will resume Friday at Walker, where it was halted Wednesday shortly after state police swung carbine butts and billy clubs to break up an attack on the Negro column by some 75 whites.

Meanwhile, H. Rap Brown, the Negro militant, arrived in the state, called Gov. John J. McKeithen "a fourth-class idiot," and said he would speak at the rally scheduled Sunday in Baton Rouge to mark the end of the 106-mile march from Bogalusa.

The decision by the Bogalusa Civic and Voters League not to march today gave a 24-hour respite to all involved, including the 200 troopers assigned to protect the marchers, whose number has varied from 6 to 100.

The attack Wednesday came at Satsuma, a little crossroads town on U.S. 190 some 30 miles east of Baton Rouge.

Several whites stumbled out of the fighting with head lacerations streaming blood. Eight men were arrested and later released on $500 bonds. Four men, one a state police officer with a gashed cheek, received treatment for head wounds at a hospital in nearby Denham Springs.

"The overwhelming majority of the Negro people do not approve of what this group is trying to do," McKeithen told a news conference Wednesday in the state Capitol at Baton Rouge.

The marchers, who left Bogalusa a week ago today, say they want to present McKeithen with a list of grievances at a rally at the Capitol. The governor says he won't be there.

"I have stood up for the principle of giving people equal opportunity, giving people equal protection of the law," said McKeithen. "That means...that the law will be enforced against white and Negro alike without favoritism."

"It means, specifically," the governor continued, "if Rap Brown comes here and violates the law he will be arrested immediately."

At the new Orleans airport, Brown, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee was asked if he would conform to state law. He replied: "I didn't make the laws, neither did black people in this country. If the laws defeat my purpose, why should I conform to them?"

He took a bus to Baton Rouge, which he calls his home, and ignored newsmen's questions when he arrived.

Unique Center Tracing Floor of the Ocean

By WILLIAM C. HARRISON
AP Science Writer

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Trick, curving sound paths in the ocean depths, behind which enemy submarines might hide, are being traced in minutes by a unique Navy oceanographic and weather center at this famous Pacific resort.

The oceanographic arm of the Fleet Numerical Weather Facility—FNWF—went operational only a year ago. But it probably is already the world's leading oceanographic forecast center.

Sound is the principal means of submarine detection. But sound paths bend in the ocean as temperature changes, creating sonar-proof curtains for submarines.

"We tell them where the sound is and is not," says Capt. Paul M. Wolff, chief of the facility.

"The paths and losses of sound in the sea are specified completely by oceanic conditions."

The facility has been using computers to solve complicated sound-temperature equations, draw velocity profiles and make sound-path calculations.

Two facility oceanographers, Lt. Cmdr. Peter R. Tatrow and Aerographer's Mate Albert L. Seeke Jr., have developed a slide-rule device that enables each ship engaged in antisubmarine operations to predict sonic conditions of the sea, Wolff says.

"Each calculation performed on this gadget is in effect replacing a computer run costing $1,500," Tatrow estimates.

He explains that sound waves emitted by a surfaced submarine will be bent down and converge at the surface again about 30 miles away, where detection is possible. Determining the convergence zone for enough ocean points to supply the Navy would be prohibitive in terms of computer time, he says.

Raw oceanographic information is relayed to the facility from about 1,000 surface ships. Included are sea-surface temperatures and subsurface thermal structures, wind waves, swells, currents, ocean forms and many other kinds of information.

A computer analyzes the information and works up an oceanographic outlook for a specified area and time, available on request to operational commanders.

The facility stresses support of the fleet in antisubmarine warfare operations and the Polaris submarine missile-defense program. But it also works closely with the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries and the Bureau of Mines.

More than half of its oceanographic soundings are supplied by fishing boats, Wolff says. The facility, in turn, furnishes the fishermen with water temperature, profiles and other information.

"They're catching more fish, and bureau officials are enthusiastic," Wolff comments.

The Bureau of Mines uses facility forecasts of wind and sea conditions for off shore drilling operations.

Wolff predicts rapid expansion of such nonmilitary services as world needs for foods and minerals increase.

ing $2,500 daily—were with the marching Negroes when the whites attacked Wednesday.

The whites marched three abreast along the highway in the opposite direction from the Negroes. When the two groups were opposite each other, the sudden harrage came. Several Negroes were knocked down before the state police, some of them on horseback, turned back the white assault.

King Cites Racial Crossroads

By DON MCKEE

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Racial conflict in America is moving toward a critical crossroads of new gains for Negroes—or violent insurrection, in the view of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., advocate of nonviolent tactics.

King considers his plan for mass civil disobedience a last resort.

"This is something like a last plea to the nation to respond to nonviolence," he said in an interview. He said it quietly, sitting in the pastor's study at his Ebenezer Baptist Church.

"We can't continue to live like this," King said. The struggle has reached the point, he went on, that convinces him there must be some quick economic gains for Negroes.

"There is a great deal of bitterness," King said. "And if there is not provided a channel of constructive action, this bitterness will lead to desperation, riots and social disruption."

If his mass civil disobedience campaign—involving boycotts, sit-ins at factories and camping in Washington—results in repressive steps by the government and by whites, then the violence "will become planned insurrection," King predicted.

King said he was motivated to announce the campaign this week by the growing violent temper of many Negroes. Asked if his new move was aimed at countering support by Black Power spokesmen, King replied that he was not singling out Black Power.

"I'm just dealing with the whole violent development," he said.

If his strategy fails, King said, "I would say to the nation, I've done my best." He said he knew of nothing else to try.

King had finished a speech to delegates to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of which he is president. He looked tired and sleepy. He answered questions in a somewhat subdued, resigned manner.

The convention reflected a similar mood. The old zeal and spirit of the movement which had logged many miles of marches and brought significant Negro advances now seemed muted.

The changed mood reflected the reality of 1967: Marches and songs and chanting "We want freedom" had been replaced by hard practicality—jobs, housing, power.

King said he saw no other course open now except civil disobedience because of what he called white recalcitrance and "the total inability and failure of Congress to grapple constructively with the problems of deprivation and poverty."

"Congress," he said, "would be very wise and just to respond constructively rather than to create a situation where our cities will continue to degenerate."

King said plans for his latest strategy will be made at a private session of the SCLC staff within the next three weeks. He said the situation requires that the campaign begin this year, before Congress adjourns.

He decided on civil disobedience as the best tactic, he said, because it offers Negroes a militant way to seek improvements and will bring many whites back into the movement.

Can he prevent participants from turning to violence? King said he thought so. Even Negroes who told him they took part in Cleveland's rioting last year were "willing to take up nonviolence," he said. The key is results, King added.

Big Gars Are Caught in Fish Kill

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — Five gar, weighing around 100 pounds each, were caught Wednesday in Hoop Lake during the first day of a five-day fish kill in six Union County lakes.

Hoop Lake is located 25 miles east of here. Jack Lee, director of the Union County Wildlife Association, said that the biggest gar was 5-foot-10 and weighed 106 pounds.

The six lakes are to be stocked with game fish. The kill was scheduled by the state Game and Fish Commission.

The literacy rate of Finland is said to be the highest in the world—99 per cent.
